The August edition of the Digital Risk Report covers a dynamic mix of legal developments at the intersection of technology, privacy, and financial regulation. This month, we examine the latest updates to the California Invasion of Privacy Act (CIPA) and the designation of Vivek Shah as a vexatious litigant, a notable shift in the CIPA litigation landscape. We also explore Florida's new stablecoin framework and break down the OppFi decision and its implications for bank-fintech lending partnerships in the state. On the artificial intelligence (AI) front, our team tackles the evolving question of copyright protection for AI-created works and takes a close look at the emerging insurance coverage battles over AI-related claims, including new exclusions, endorsements, and recent claim denials. Whether you're navigating privacy litigation, fintech regulation, or the rapidly shifting AI legal landscape, this issue has something for you.
