CHARLOTTE, NC — A workplace culture built on teamwork, trust, and genuine investment in its people has once again distinguished Shumaker, earning the firm's Charlotte office a place on the Charlotte Business Journal's Best Places to Work list for the fourth time and the third consecutive year.

The recognition highlights organizations that excel in employee engagement, satisfaction, and workplace culture. For Shumaker, the repeat honor reflects an ongoing commitment to creating an environment where professionals feel valued, supported, and empowered to deliver exceptional results for clients and the community.

"Earning a place on this list again is a reflection of the people in our Charlotte office and the culture they create every day," said Andy Culicerto, Charlotte and Greenville Managing Partner and Board of Directors Member at Shumaker. "Collaboration, respect, and a genuine investment in one another are at the heart of how we work, and we are proud to see that experience recognized for a fourth time."

Shumaker's Charlotte office continues to grow its capabilities and community presence across the region, supported by a workplace that prioritizes professional development, meaningful work, and teamwork at every level.
