Terence's practice focuses primarily on defending medical malpractice and catastrophic personal injury litigation on behalf of medical providers and institutions. With nearly a decade of experience, Terence's clients rely on him to achieve favorable outcomes in and out of the courtroom.

Terence has a diverse civil litigation defense background spanning cases involving professional liability, nursing home and long-term care liability, product liability, construction defect, insurance coverage disputes, premises liability, and motor vehicle negligence. He has successfully secured several defense verdicts and awards for his clients as lead counsel in both jury trials and arbitration.

Terence received his J.D from Fordham University School of Law and his B.S., magna cum laude from Quinnipiac University School of Business.
