Shumaker Partner Brett Henson will be a panelist for the Realtor Association of Sarasota and Manatee (RASM) next week speaking on the state of the building construction market. For prospective purchasers or tenants of commercial real estate, two of the most important considerations before undertaking a building project are time and cost of construction. The program will feature a panel discussion between Mike Beaumier, John LaCivita, and Brett regarding the current state of the construction economy in the Sarasota-Bradenton area, and provide suggestions on how commercial purchasers and lessors might best address the issues of price escalation and time uncertainty before beginning a project.
